What We Borrow From BCCI and TCAI

Both examples use a conventional menu. We keep the cricket-ground idea and take their best working parts.

BCCI (bcci.tv)

- Short menu: News, Videos, Photos, Matches, Players, More
- Upcoming-match strip right under the header
- One big featured story with a video
- Footer in four columns: About, Governance, Operations, Contact
- Jobs and Tenders pages as plain links

TCAI (tenniscricketassociationindia.com)

- Gold Registration button in the header and again on the first screen
- Short player form: name, guardian, contact, DOB, address, state, category, batting and bowling style, club
- Public player list by state with an ID like 00403-MH, searchable
- “Let’s Connect” footer with quick links, policies, address and four social icons
- Disclaimer, Privacy Policy, Terms pages

How SSCFI uses them

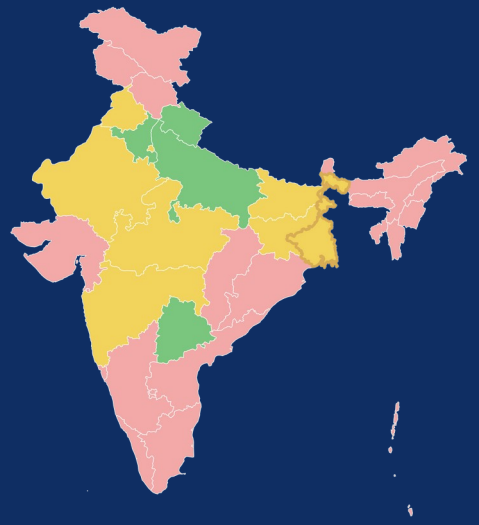

Ticker and four-column footer on every page. Gold Registration button beside the bat and ball. Player IDs like 00001-WB. The ground, the seven players and the district map stay our own.

One thing we won’t copy

TCAI’s public list shows date of birth and father’s name, including for children. SSCFI should show only name, ID, state and category.

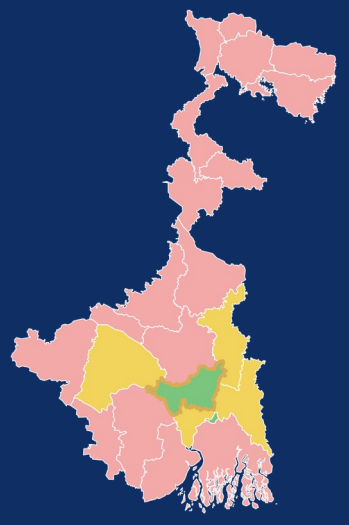

Find Us on the Map: Four Taps

To settle before design starts

- Confirm the seven tabs and what bat and ball open
- Secretary's name; phone numbers; photos
- Committee, core and advisory lists
- Fields on the three registration forms
- Which old pages and photos carry over (many are from 2014)

Developer notes: the map

- Boundary view (India, state, district) from free GeoJSON data; street view for ground locations from Google Maps or OpenStreetMap
- The data used here is census-based. Confirm its outline against Survey of India maps before launch, and refresh when districts change
- Status colours come from the same data as the District Tracker
- Map and registration need a database; a plain page cannot do this
